

Wagga Wagga Museum now has a second Menneke Bell.

This menneke bell was recently donated to the Museum of the Riverina at Wagga Wagga. The owner handed it over after realising its historical significance. The bell had spent a good number of its recent years hanging outside in an orchard where it was used to scare away birds. Considering its history, the bell was in remarkably good condition.
